FINAL RULING NO. 2010-64
October 1, 2010

Denial of 2009 New Home Tax Credit Application

FINAL RULING

The Department of Revenue ("DOR") has denied the application for a new home tax credit submitted by [REDACTED] pursuant to KRS 141.388. The required application was never received by the DOR. The home tax credit claimed on the 2009 tax return was denied and the requested refund of $ [REDACTED] was reduced to $ [REDACTED].

The sole basis of the DOR's denial of the credit is that an application for the new home tax credit was not submitted to the DOR in a timely manner.

The statute creating the new home tax credit unambiguously states:

Within seven (7) calendar days after the purchase of a qualified principal residence, the qualified buyer shall submit via fax a completed application for the new home tax credit on forms provided by the department.

Furthermore, KRS 141.388(4) provides:

The application for the new home tax credit shall be void if:

* * * * *

(b) The application is not received within seven (7) calendar days from the purchase; or

* * * * *

Under the facts and applicable law stated above, the application at issue was not received by the DOR within seven days of the purchase of the new home and is therefore void. [REDACTED] argues that this requirement should be overlooked or excused because he was not made aware of this requirement. The law is clear, however, that “[e]very person is conclusively presumed to know the law.” Oppenheimer v. Commonwealth, 305 Ky. 147, 202 S.W.2d 373, 375 (1947). Our state’s highest court long ago observed that [t]here is a maxim as old as the law itself, ignorantia legis neminem excusat, ‘ignorance of the law excuses no one’, 42 C.J.S. page 380. This is a rule of necessity, otherwise ignorance of the law would furnish immunity from punishment for violations of the Criminal Code and immunity from liability for violations of personal and property rights. Topolewski v. Plankington, 143 Wis. 52, 73, 126 N.W. 554, 561. In Logsdon v. Haney, 74 S.W. 1073, 25 Ky. Law Rep. 245, it was written that this maxim has been applied with the same rigor in this jurisdiction as elsewhere, and that one’s non-action through ignorance of the law could not be allowed to extend or enlarge his legal rights.

Freeman v. Louisville & Jefferson Planning & Zoning Comm’n, 380 Ky. 360, 214 S.W.2d 582, 583 (1948). In this case, the plaintiff argued that it was not aware of an amendment to a law shortening its time to file an appeal. The court rejected that argument, holding that like all changes made in the law by the Legislature, it was necessary for the litigants to keep themselves informed thereof—ignorance on the part of a litigant of a change the Legislature has made in the law will not excuse him from its effect nor allow him to extend or enlarge his legal rights.

Id. at 584. By the same token, ignorance of the deadline for submission of the application of the new home tax credit cannot permit the DOR to overlook non-compliance with that deadline.

Finally, it should be noted that the Commonwealth of Kentucky and the DOR in particular did provide ample information to the public that would have enabled any interested person to find out about the new home tax credit and its requirements, including the one at issue here. The Governor issued a press release on July 8, 2009 that specifically stated that “[t]o qualify, the buyer must submit a credit application within seven days of closing on the property” and provided directions on how to obtain further information from the DOR. This further information included the application and details concerning the credit's requirements prominently featured on the DOR's website in its Hot Topics Section. The DOR also described the new home tax credit and its requirements at length in the October, 2009 edition of its publication Kentucky Tax Alert. Finally, the application itself (Form 40A103) specifically states that

You Cannot Claim the Credit If

- Your application is not received via fax within seven calendar days from the purchase date.

Thus, there were ample means by which a taxpayer who was applying or considering applying for this credit could or should have learned of the requirement that the application had to be faxed to the DOR within seven days of purchase.

For the reasons stated above, the new home tax credit was properly denied in this case.

This letter is the final ruling of the Department of Revenue.
