[Redacted LLC] protested the original audit results for several different reasons. There are two issues remaining. The taxpayer feels that the cost of a repair to a capitalized piece of equipment should be removed from the assessment. The taxpayer also maintains that five cement tanks should be reclassified from class V property to class IV property.

The Cabinet deems that any repair which restores the value of a capitalized item should be capitalized as well and is taxable for property tax.
Cement tankers customarily have an extended useful life. The wear and tear an asset received during use is not the underlying factor in determining the classification. It is the practice of the Cabinet to list tanks and tankers as class V property.

The taxpayer and the taxpayer's representative were sent a letter dated [redacted], 2005 which stated the Cabinet's position relative to the issues detailed above. In the correspondence the taxpayer was given until [redacted], 2005 to request a formal conference, submit payment for the outstanding assessment or a final ruling would be issued. To date, the taxpayer has not requested a formal conference nor paid the outstanding assessment.

Therefore, the outstanding tangible property tax assessment totaling $[redacted] (plus applicable interest and penalties) is deemed a legitimate liability of [redacted] LLC due the Commonwealth of Kentucky.

This letter is the final ruling of the Department of Revenue.
